

Abstract Submission for Third International Conference on Gynecology, Obstetrics and Women's Health

Title : Abdominal Pregnancy: Epidemiological, Diagnostic, Therapeutic and Prognostic Aspects: A Case Report from the Yaounde Central Hospital (Cameroon)

Authors : Kamga Talom, A., Ymele, F.F., Dingom, M.N. and Fouedjio, J.

DOI : <https://doi.org/10.4236/ojog.2021.114038>

Email : kamtalar@gmail.com

Whatsapp number : +237 699260092

Abstract :

Abdominal pregnancy (AP) is a relatively rare and potentially serious form of ectopic pregnancies (EPs). We report the case of a haemorrhagic abdominal pregnancy at 15 weeks of amenorrhea complicated by hypovolaemic shock, with a favorable outcome. Our aim is to outline the epidemiological, clinical, therapeutic and prognostic features of this condition.

Keywords :

Abdominal Pregnancy, Epidemiology, Prognosis, Yaoundé, Cameroon